SYNOPSIS

Born of a mix between a «pili pili» and a «croissant», Gaël Faye had to leave his native Burundi torn by civil war in 1995, and came to France. After 15 years of forced exile, now as a singer songwriter, he felt the need to return to “the starting point to complete a story started midway». Rapper with the group Milk Coffee & Sugar, which gives writing workshops with young people with learning difficulties in France, Gaël Faye sets off on a sort of pilgrimage with his friend Edgar Sekloka aka Suga. In Rwanda, between two concerts, he visits the Kigali Genocide Memorial Centre. Then, with nostalgia, insight and hope, he heads to Burundi to see again the home, the school and the city where he grew up.
